June 24, 1926 — a symbolic day in the history of Moldovan civil aviation, honored with gratitude

Nearly a century ago, on June 24, 1926, Moldova’s skies were crossed for the first time by a commercial flight on the route Bucharest – Galați – Chișinău. It was more than just a flight: it marked the official opening of Moldovan airspace, the beginning of a story destined to connect a land of people, lives, and futures through wings.

This day remains a landmark with deep symbolic meaning for civil aviation in the Republic of Moldova — a founding moment that ushered in the modern era of air transport and integrated our country into a global network of connections.
